

DEDICATION
OF
JEWELL SCHOOL DISTRICT 8

May 7, 1978

There has always been a school at Jewell or nearby. One of the first elementary schools was located on the point down the road toward Jewell. Mr. I. N. Foster was the teacher at this one-room schoolhouse. Decendents still reside in the community. The elementary building shown opposite was constructed in three stages. A one-room school, complete with small stage, was built in 1919. Two classrooms were added in 1927. The last addition of a classroom and aide's room was completed in 1959.

Until the high school was built in 1925, students were sent to Birkenfeld, 12 miles from Jewell. The consolidated high school received students from various logging camp schools in the area and from schools at Elsie, Vinemaple and, of course, from Jewell. The consolidated name was dropped as the elementary schools and the camps closed, one by one.

The oldest building on the school grounds is the gymnasium which was erected in 1964. The Library building was added in 1970, along with breeze-ways to connect the grade school, the high school and the gym.

In 1972, when the timber revenue from the state began to come in increasingly larger amounts, the school board decided to establish a building fund to add needed classroom space, a much needed cafeteria and to replace existing structures.

An architectural firm was retained and plans drawn for several building phases. Building began in 1973 as follows: Phase I--the Shop and Science building; Phase II--the Cafeteria and replacement of the locker rooms; Phase III--four high school classrooms, the Office and the main hallway to tie all the existing structures together; and Phase IV--the replacement of the Grade School building and play-shed. All phases were completed in 1977.

Many of the people who have passed through this school system are memories. The town of Jewell is only a memory for those who knew it, but the school still remains a vital part of the community. These buildings begin their future not only as a school, but as a community center serving young and old alike.

Dear Mrs. Smith:

Please convey my most sincere congratulations to the school board and the citizens of Jewell, on the dedication of your new school facilities. I know they are the result of a spirit of cooperation and commitment on the part of your community.

You should all be very proud of these new school buildings; they will serve the children of Jewell well for many years to come.

Best wishes.

Cordially,
